Our Story

Kitchen Kettle Village is situated in the Village of Intercourse, Pennsylvania, which is located in Lancaster County's beautiful Pennsylvania Dutch Country. It traces its colorful origins to 1954, when Bob and Pat Burnley purchased a small jelly business and set up operations in their two-car garage. As business grew and tourism became a major factor in the area's economy, the "garage" slowly transformed into a bustling Jam & Relish Kitchen that also incorporates a Bake Shop, and annually attracts almost a million visitors from points worldwide.

Kitchen Kettle offers a growing array of jams, jellies, relishes, butters and preserves, as well as mustards, pickles and salsas that are still made the old-fashioned way – by local farm women who use a small-batch cooking process for peak flavor and quality control. Pat Burnley took years to develop her famous Chow Chow recipe, and her pickled beets are some of the best in the world. Other recipes have been handed down through generations of great local cooks. And new recipes, more contemporary in flavor, tap into the popularity of hot and spicy ingredients as well as more healthful choices.

The Jam & Relish Kitchen is truly the heart of Kitchen Kettle Village. Quaint buildings that have been crafted over the past 60+ years from the family homestead, the original garage, stables and even an old chicken coop provide authenticity while staying true to Kitchen Kettle's philosophy of simple pleasures with a dose of fun thrown in. Tree-lined lanes with names like Peach, Pepper, Rhubarb Road and Blueberry Boulevard lead visitors to more than 40 clothing, craft, artisan and food shops, a fine art gallery, wine shop, two restaurants, 17 lodging rooms, plus special attractions for children. Banjo Jimmy and his Sidemen, who have been performing at the Village for more than 30 years, are a village institution with their own following.
